Q: Under both state law (G.S. 67-4.1) and Orange County's draft ordinance, a dog that bites, attacks or threatens someone who is committing a willful trespass will not be considered a dangerous, potentially dangerous, or vicious dog. How can animal control officials decide when this exception applies?